

PATRICK TELLS WARDEN NOT TO HURRY HIS DEATH

Says Application for Writ of Error Will Act as a Stay.

Listening to preparations for his own execution has become an incident in the life of the Sing Sing prisoner of Albert T. Patrick, so he was not disturbed when told today that preparations for putting him to death in the electric chair next week were under way and that the invitations to the event would be sent out on Thursday.

"I wouldn't be too precipitate, if I were you," said the condemned lawyer to Warden Johnson. "I have my application to the United States Circuit Court for a writ of error about completed and the filing of the petition will act as a stay. I am merely giving you my legal view of the case with the sole object of saving you some trouble."

Hangs by Slender Thread.

Patrick's life hangs now by a slender thread. The petition to the United States Circuit Court is all there is between him and the death chamber. It is a fragile barrier, but the supreme confidence of this remarkable man has not deserted him, and he is as cool and resourceful as at any time during his four years in the condemned cells.

His wife called on him yesterday and told him that Recorder Coff had refused his application for a new trial. He had expected the decision and had anticipated it by beginning work some time ago upon his last appeal to a judicial tribunal. It is a long chance for further delay.

Patrick's counsel will present the petition to a United States Judge as soon as possible, and the filing of the application will not act as a stay until a decision is rendered upon it. Should the court grant the writ, there is no ground for a writ of error. Patrick will be executed next week unless the Governor should interfere.

An Appeal to Higgins.

Preparations have been made for an overwhelming appeal to Gov. Higgins in case the United States Court fails Patrick. The attitude of the Governor is not at all favorable. Patrick is determined to take advantage of every opportunity and he and his counsel hope that a remarkable petition for commutation of sentence that has been signed by hundreds of prominent men and women will serve in his favor.

Although the prison rules allow the wife or nearest relative of a condemned man to visit him but once a week, the rule will be broken in the case of Mrs. Patrick in view of the near approach of the date set for her husband's execution. She will be allowed to see him again Friday or Saturday on what may be her farewell call. Patrick's reprieve expires on Monday.

CHRIS COLUMBUS WAS COLD TO HIM

Philadelphia Friend Repulsed
When He Invited Statue to Have Drink.

Through the gold gray dawn to-day Policeman Taylor strode down through Columbus Circle. Christopher Columbus stared from his pedestal and wished it was warmer. A man behind him was trying to attract his attention.

"Hello, Chris," he shouted. "Time to looker up," and he waved a couple of bottles frantically. He was trying to climb up the slippery base when the policeman interrupted him with the request to accompany him to the station-house. The friend of Columbus resisted and was yanked till he was good.

In the West Side Court to-day the patron of discoverers was asked to explain. He stood himself with dignity. "I'm well known, highly respected citizen Philadelphia," he remarked. "I insist on name, will you John J. Ketchum, and live No. 43 Cherry street, forehead prominent, city."

Columbus old friend mine; come over same ship. Endeavoring renew acquaintance when this person," with a withering glance at the policeman, "interfered with violence an accompanied police station—eleventh night. I'm perfect gentleman of marked importance, engaged silk business. Wish had some refreshment."

"If you are a respectable citizen and can give an account of yourself, I may be able to deal more satisfactorily with your case," said the Magistrate. "Respected citizen don't care what you do with case," chirped the mischievous gnat.

"Fine you do," snapped the Judge.

The respected citizen, who, he said, he was led away to a cell, the next five days in rustication on an island in the East River.

LOST AIRSHIP IN FRONT YARD OF JERSEY HOME

Lands in Garfield, N. J., and Frightens Whole Family.

When Mamma Klopfer looked out of the window of the little cottage in Garfield, N. J., to-day where she and Papa Klopfer and the little Klopfers live, she gave one shriek and fled to the clothes closet. Papa Klopfer was sound asleep, as were the little Klopfers, but they all jumped straight up in their beds and wanted to know what the matter was.

"Ach, jeh!" shrieked the good wife. "Es giebt etwas fuerchterliches mit on bauch!" which freely translated means that an animal of appetite without was looking for grubstake. Papa Klopfer pulled down his nightcap and am-pared to the window while the little Klopfers ceased their lamentations and watched fearfully.

"Pots Donnerwetter," yelled Papa Klopfer when he saw the thing. "Bring me mine revolver quick!"

It was only after the sun was full above the horizon that they dared to venture forth. Herr Klopfer went ahead with a piece of gas pipe in one hand and a carving knife in the other. It was a wonderful old dragon they saw in possession in the front yard. It had the most capacious paunch in the world and rolled lazily from side to side like an old whale. Papa Klopfer stole up and prodded it in the side with the carving knife. At once it began to sneeze at its tormentor with thin whistles through the hole the knife had made.

It was not long before the news of the wonder spread through the village and the street in front of Klopfer's house was filled with excited townsfolk. They pointed and gabbled and pointed, for here had the like come to Garfield before. It was a great pot-bellied old thing this dragon, and no wonder it had terrified Mamma Klopfer, for it towered clear up to the top of the second-story window. It had great, fish feet more like the flippers of a flying fish.

"Meine Kohlen Pflanzen!" wailed Mamma Klopfer as she caressed tenderly the protruding end of the winter sauer-kraut patch. The dragon lurched genially towards her. It had been on a long trip the night before and wanted to lean on something. Its lungs were leaking badly. They had strained when filled at the Jersey gas house yesterday. Its flippers were broken where it had hit the apple tree in the orchard too hard.

The dragon's interior mechanism felt precisely as that of any one else does who has been out on a bat and is experiencing the joy of the morning after and the awakening in a strange land. There too was the fear the inhabitant would cut up to mend rubber boots with unless his master came speedily. The constable tried to move it in vain and the police called a bottle of bonfires but was dissuaded when reminded of the explosion that had ruined his home permanently in such a case.

Meanwhile the monster awaits a claimant to cut up to mend rubber boots, waiting for her Kohlen Pflanzen.

MASS-MEETING TO LARGE BRIDGE WORK

East Siders Want to See Some Progress on Blackwell's Island Structure.

A mass-meeting of east side citizens interested in the early completion of the Blackwell's Island Bridge will assemble to-night at Terrace Garden. In addition to those in Manhattan who are indignant at the long delay in the completion of this necessary improvement there will be a big attendance from Long Island City and Queens Borough in general.

Although the Bridge Commissioner and the officers of the Pennsylvania Steel Company declare that work on the Blackwell's Island Bridge is progressing, residents of the east side who have grown cross-eyed watching the tantalizing make-shifts employed by the contractors say the job is practically at a standstill.

A movement will be set on foot at the mass-meeting to-night to force an agreement as to the terminal plans on this and the other side of the river. Property-owners between Fifty-eighth and Sixty-first streets and Third avenue and First avenue are losing money every day while the terminal plans are held up. They have allowed repairs on their buildings to lapse because they do not know whether they will be compelled to tear them down to make space for the bridge approach or not.

WALDO'S MOTHER HAS ATTACK IN STREET.

While walking in Thirty-third street, on her way to Fourth avenue, to board a Madison avenue car shortly after 9 o'clock last evening, Mrs. Rhineclander Waldo, mother of Deputy Police Commissioner Waldo, became ill from an attack of acute indigestion, but after being assisted to the boarding-house at No. 10 East Thirty-third street she soon recovered and was able to proceed to her home at No. 31 East Seventy-second street.

Mrs. Waldo had dined at the Waldorf-Astoria and had just left to catch a car for home. She was one of her most elaborate gowns with several diamonds, and was first noticed by boarders at No. 10 East Thirty-third street when she was able to proceed to her home at No. 31 East Seventy-second street.

Meanwhile the monster awaits a claimant to cut up to mend rubber boots, waiting for her Kohlen Pflanzen.

Why My Summer Suits Are $15.00

I offer you the same Summer fabrics that many other tailors are buying at the same mills. Some of them are Galashiel's Tweeds, Blackington Waxed, Dracena Serges, Irish Tweeds, Wiswell's Crashes, Heatherington Cheviots—the popular things of the season. With my volume of business and economical system, and with no bad debts to saddle upon you, I can make my price $15.00—a price no tailor on earth can meet without duplicating my plant and adopting similar methods.

TROUSERS of equally popular goods, $4.00.
